THE CHANGING HOUSING MARKET GREAT NEWS FOR INVESTORS!

Census data continues to provide revealing insights into the changing housing market.

It is quite clear now that at some point over the past five years there has been a shift towards renting rather than owner occupation. The Australian Bureau of Statistics Census revealed 29.6% of residential dwelling occupiers were tenants. This was higher than the 27.2% in 2006 and also higher than in 2001 where 26.3% were recorded as tenants.

This shift, combined with the natural increase in population, has meant that demand for rental accommodation has accelerated over the past five years.

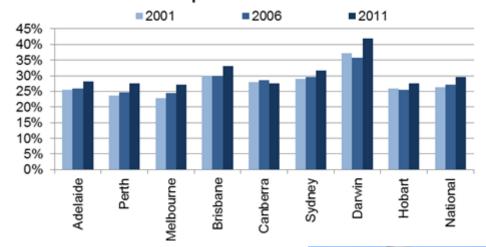

The supply of rental dwellings has also increased at an accelerated rate. However, the evidence suggests demand has gradually been outstripping the increase in supply.

This in turn gives explanation as to why rents have been rising considerably above inflation over the same period and vacancy rates have been trending down over that period of time in most areas of Australia^.

This shift towards renting is also attributed to the unaffordable housing market, the reluctance to take on mortgage debt as well as an awareness of falling sale prices.

It could therefore be concluded that rents (particularly at the affordable end of the market) will continue to rise at these accelerated levels unless there is a strong change in the market for tenants to move back to home ownership.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY!

Refer to the below table for vacancy comparisons

^ With the exclusion of Melbourne. Vacancies are calculated based on online rental listings that have been advertised for three weeks or more compared to the total number of established rental property.

INVESTMENT TIP:A COMMON MISTAKE

Being afraid of making a mistake – and doing nothing

Being conservative is a good attribute to possess. However, if you are too conservative then you run the risk of being one of those people who don't do anything at all. Even when opportunity knocks man still has to get up and answer the door.

LANDLORD VS PROPERTY INVESTOR IS THERE A DIFFERENCE?

It can be considered that a landlord is an owner who finds and manages the tenant, collects the rent and acts as the handyman when there is maintenance to be done. Which, is fine if you want to make owning a property a hobby or a second job.

The property investor, on the other hand, takes a business perspective and spends the same time on their finance, taxation, ownership structures and next property investment opportunity. They don't 'fix toilets', they get other people to do it. They treat it as a cost of doing business and it is tax deductible. Professional investors in some cases have never seen the properties that they have invested in as they are assets with no emotional attachment. If you want to be a successful property investor with multiple properties, trying to be a landlord will wear you down, make you time poor and will result in you selling instead of buying more.
